

Who are we?

Flying for Life is a Public Benefit Organisation that aims to sustainably uplift isolated communities in South Africa through aviation.

Those living in isolation have no real access to specialist healthcare - doctors move to higher earning hospitals in bigger cities and supplies are depleted. Healthcare is just one major area that needs uplifting. There are many more.

Through Flying for Life's partnerships with medical professionals, early childhood development trainers, social development specialists, other non-profit organisations and the government people in rural isolated areas of South Africa are able to receive life-changing cataract surgeries, cancer awareness training, dental operations and many other specialist services for free.
